

SHY leaves lawyers completely in the dark

So often blackout blinds, don't. They come free from the side channels and jam. The result is light where there should be none and a blind that doesn't work.

A major legal firm in Scotland had this problem in the past and certainly did not want it again in a new blind system for the board room. Mike Falla of Incorporated Blind Systems Limited suggested the foolproof performance of SHY's Zip System.

The board room is part of three identical rooms which can be made into one by removable partitions. Each now has its own blind system consisting of three manually operated SHY Obscura roller blinds for normal shading and three Electric SHY Zip Screen Blackout Blinds with (radio) wireless operation. The wireless system provides flexible control and was simple to install.

Everyone agrees. The case for SHY – proven
